

Bespoke Joinery

University College London is London's leading multidisciplinary university with 25,000 students from over 150 countries. The university imposing Grade II listed Cruciform building dates back to 1896 and was designed by Victorian architect Alfred Waterhouse. The building houses the university's student hub including library, café, teaching and study areas. Hurst Joinery Projects has played a major role in the refurbishment of this hub during 2014.

Location: Cruciform Building,
Gower Street, Central London

Date: Completion August 2104

Scope of Works:

Bespoke joinery package including manufacture, supply and installation of:

- Individual and group study booths
- Bench seating and tables to reception, informal discussion and quiet study areas
- Service desks including storage
- PC work bench
- Pigeon hole unit
- Catalogue terminals bench

thehurstgroup.co.uk