The goal was to create an attractive and modern office environment suitable for potential tenants. The client had specific joinery requirements, including an American Oak slatted feature wall, unique curved feature, core wall slatted panelling, teapoint shelves, and column claddings. Hurst was chosen for their reputation for reliability and expertise.

Solution:

Hurst Joinery Projects played a crucial role in the project, starting with the design phase. They provided valuable consultations and recommendations for materials to ensure the desired outcome. The specific joinery requirements, such as the feature wall, curved planter, core wall slatted paneling, teapoint shelves, and column claddings, were manufactured and installed according to the client's specifications.

Design Considerations and Special Features:

One of the notable design considerations was the creation of a unique curved feature planter, which presented a challenge due to its unconventional concept and shape. Hurst's expertise and design input were instrumental in achieving this stunning feature.
